Military Road where
it crossed Bushalier
Creek in Spanaway

Military Road

The first military road built in Washington State runs through Spanaway. But it wasn't built by the military. Captain George B. McClelland had searched for a route across the Cascades in 1849, but reported that a northern route cutting the rugged Cascades could not be built.

The road was already funded by Congress to create a northern route for immigrant trains. So local pioneers decided to tackle the job themselves.

The amateur roadbuilders followed a Native American trail and completed the road from Fort Steilacoom to Fort Walla Walla in 1853. Rock cairns on 152nd Street (Old Military Road) mark the route through Spanaway.
